

the cooking guy

Dear _____'s dad,

I wanted to take a moment to tell you how hard _____ tried to get this book signed for you. I've had a few book signings so far, and it was _____'s plan to make it to one of them - sometimes though life just gets in the way. On the way to the first signing, _____ saw a woman walking down the street clearly in need of assistance (you know _____, always thinking of others). And when _____ stopped to see what the woman needed, it turned out she was in labor and _____ assisted in the birth of her child. How amazing and miraculous. As a father of 3 myself, I'm envious I've never participated in the birth of a child - but enough about me. On the way to another signing _____ stopped at a corner grocery store to get a bottle of water and noticed a robbery in progress. With a cool head and calm words, _____ managed to talk the perpetrator out of her gun (a woman perp, weird I know) and kept everyone calm until the authorities arrived. Sadly though, both of these heroic efforts resulted in _____ missing the book signings. But _____ really isn't comfortable talking about any of this, so I ask that you not bring it up. Just know if this book could have been signed, it would have been signed.

Clearly _____ is not just a good child, but also a great human. You should be proud.

Happy father's day, and I hope it's a wonderful day for you.

Sam the Cooking Guy